Journal Entry 1

The Almer lands are my home. I can't even believe it. As I sit here on the edge of Mervigor, I can look around at our 8 clans with a sense of pride. My nation. A nation of peace, of equality, not diversity. To think during my days of gloom, I never thought in a million years I would find such a place to call home. Nobody. Jews. Father, mother, everyone. I've found peace and I know that you have to.

Yet my dreams are haunted by pale blood eyes, silently accusing. What right do they have to accuse me of betrayal after the way they rejected me? I didn't betray them. I didn't. But no matter how many times I tell myself that, I can't seem to believe it.

I am here, a part of the beautiful society while they are dying. Fighting for their home, for their land. I use to be one of those deep Jews. Still am. I could go back. The Almer are to remain neutral at all times but the 4th law I could use the 4th law and go back and fight. I am worth a hundred soldiers. I could fight back, protect these lands and what? More violence won't solve anything. If I fight, they will only retaliate even harder and worse will do. I cannot defeat a whole nation by myself. Besides those that I protect will only reject me again out of fear.

No, I've lost Palestine. But I can still protect the Almer. I am a Guardian and I will defend my new home, my new family till my last breath. Hopefully with the Almer treaty everyone will learn he/she is able to find peace in their lands. I have faith in the elders, they will make the nations see reason.
